

Tips for using Bug Club Phonics Decodable books with your UFLI lesson

When reading decodable texts, students may encounter some phonemes/graphemes that have not yet been taught. During your UFLI lesson, use the Bug Club Phonics Decodable books to provide in-context exposure to the phoneme/grapheme that you are currently teaching. How?

- Through shared reading or an interactive read-aloud. Highlight the focus grapheme as you read.
- On a second reading of the same book, you may want students to indicate the grapheme as you read by putting their hands on their head, for example. You may choose to review other graphemes already taught.
- During the shared reading or interactive read-aloud, read the words with unfamiliar graphemes without drawing attention to them. (If students point out an unfamiliar grapheme, take the opportunity to discuss it.)
- For student practice, consider assigning the same decodable book that you used during the lesson so students gain confidence decoding the text already shared. Students will also benefit from reading another book within the same BCP decodable set.
